

Restoration Advisory Board for the Camp Croft Formerly Used Defense Sites Property Seeks New Members

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACE) is conducting environmental remediation activities at the Camp Croft FUDS property, located in Spartanburg County, South Carolina to address risks from munitions that remain at the Camp's former ranges. The remedies involve public education, signage, and removal of munitions for some projects.

As part of the restoration process, the Department of Defense encourages community involvement through Restoration Advisory Boards (RABs). RABs provide a collaborative forum for stakeholders to discuss and identify the most efficient and productive means to restore the environment with officials from USACE and state agencies.

The Camp Croft FUDS property has an active RAB that includes members from the local community, and a representative from USACE and the South Carolina Department of Environmental Services. The RAB is jointly co-chaired by the USACE and a community representative. The community members of the RAB select the community co-chair. RABs meet on a regular basis and meetings are open to the public. Membership is voluntary and USACE does not provide any form of financial compensation to RAB community members.

The RAB is looking to expand its membership. If you are interested in being a RAB member, you should be willing to attend all quarterly RAB meetings, which typically last approximately two hours, and spend time reviewing environmental restoration documents within prescribed timeframes. Meetings are held within 20 miles of the Croft State Park.

Those interested in becoming a RAB member should submit expressions of interest by October 15, 2025, to:
